Still life in mine

BY SARAH SCULLY

Northern Grampians Shire leaders are celebrating significant progress at Stawell Gold Mine set to create jobs, boost the region's economy and potentially cement the historic mining town on the international map.

Mayor Tony Driscoll said he was thrilled to see a mine refurbishment project start to pay dividends after a tumultuous few years, which included the suspension of underground mining in December 2016.

"We don't want to dwell on the past too much but 150 jobs were guillined by the previous owners, which was obviously devastating for the Stawell community," he said.

"Since Arete Capital Partners acquired a 100 percent controlling interest in Stawell Gold Mine at the end of last year, things have started to look up.

"The new company is very proactive and is already putting money into the site, doing up amenities blocks and completing maintenance that was necessary after the site was left alone for a while.

"Employment has increased and further potential for an increase in jobs is fantastic.

"Where there is life, there is hope and this is wonderful for our region."

Mine general manager Troy Cole said company leaders were confident of returning to mining operations following a successful exploration period.

"After exploration over the past seven months we're looking to start the next stage of the mine's redevelopment," he said.

"Recruiting further staff will be the next step and then we're looking to commence our operations again next year."

The Stawell mine employed between 10 and 15 people during a 'care and maintenance phase' following the suspension of underground operations. Mr Cole said the mine had a current workforce of 64, including Stawell Gold Mine staff and diamond drilling contractors.

"We've been slowly building up our workforce throughout the year while doing refurbishment work on our infrastructure," he said.

"We've just got to the stage where we've made the decision to push ahead on improving our mills and mine fleets."

Mr Cole said mine leaders would look to employ between 100 and 120 staff by the end of the year.

"If all goes well, we would like to increase that workforce to 140 to 150 by the middle of next year," he said.

"The recruitment process will be a big job and an exciting one.

"I've been through the rollercoaster of activities with different owners. At some times you get investment, sometimes you don't. It's the nature of the industry."

Mr Cole said investment of more than $30-million would be pumped into the mine's next start-up phase in the next 12 months.

"It is not a small investment and we will look to further significant investments after that," he said.
